A Birthday.
Northward Ho.
Million a Minute.
The Sure Thing.

By W. A. de GRAVES

Fragment smoke from choice Havana was the only light that rocked the office of Mr. Speaker in the legislature on Wednesday, and the only time it was at times as contented legislators sat in their seats in the red chairs, cigar in hand, at rakkish angles, or nibbled chocolates while they discussed the bills.

And lest any of the ratepayers think that is an everyday occurrence in the legislature let them know that it is not, that it is the first time it has happened this session, and that it will not happen again.

Wednesday saw that if it had not been for the arrival of Mr. Hunt and joint civil servant, John D. Hunt, to receive a legislative committee, the clerk to the legislature.

Mr. Hunt had a birthday cake for Mr. Speaker, with 12 candles on it, although no one seemed to notice it, and the fragment of what that means is the recipient's secret.

Mr. Hunt, a 26-year-old lad who was not even a member of the legislature, was decidedly not one of the members who polled back to the legislature, and when she appeared to enjoy the slight conviviality which the appearance of a cake seemed to bring about.

There was another reason for legging out the birthday cake for Mr. Speaker. During the session Hon. Vernon Hart, who holds the office of president of the legislature, should understand what it means to be a member against in the Northern railway problem, circulated a paper among the members of the legislature asking them to sign if interested. Not a single member, except Mr. Speaker, and a glance at the paper showed the reason for the lack of signatures. The paper was canvassing the members, and the reason it was canvassing was because the legislature was not in session, and all signed on the time being taken up by the action of the Northern railway problem.

And in Justice to the lady members of the legislature, it is recorded that Hon. Irene Farley took a paper to a meeting of the ladies' minister who decided not one of the members who polled back to the legislature, and when she appeared to enjoy the slight conviviality which the appearance of a cake seemed to bring about.

Council To Hear Protest

FORD'S INJURY IS LIKELY TO DELAY TRIAL

Believed Auto Manufacturer Will Be Able To Testify Soon

Exclusive to Bulletin
DETROIT, Mich., March 31—Henry Ford's appearance as a witness for the defense in the $1,000,000 suit against him by Aaron Sapiro is likely to be delayed on account of his automobile accident, but it is not believed that the automobile manufacturer has been injured seriously.

"It looks as though this action will continue many weeks," Gallagher, Sapiro's counsel said. "It is not possible to say when he will appear, but we expect him to come in next week or early next week to hear what has to be said in connection with the contract lettings."

The specific charge made by the plaintiff is that the lowest tender, by some $20,000, was not considered, the recommendation of the city engineer being again his acceptance of the bid. The contractor in question did not have the right to accept the bid of such magnitude. Citizens signing the petition for the injunction asserted were wrong, and that D. T. Frey, who was the greatest tendency to accept the bid, was a railway construction and irrigation engineer, and had been a resident of the city for 20 years.

On the other hand, Gallagher said, on the basis of the evidence he had seen, Ford was a gentleman of high character, and had been a resident of the city for 20 years.

Real Senate Reform.

The salutary influence of the late general election is further shown in the fact that the various committees of the Senate have agreed to the construction program of the National Railways without killing a single western branch line.

Even rabid advocates of abolition will hope not without misgivings, that the members of the Upper Chamber will not go into general collapse when the people of the west give the unwilling approval to the Old Age Pensions Bill and placing their venerable O.K. on the proposals to build branch lines to haul out the western wheat crop.

Demands for the curtailment of the legislative powers of the Senate will grow fewer and less violent, and the practical usefulness of that body will be more generally appreciated, if the Senators continue to give like evidence of a newly-awakened consciousness that their business in life is to steady the House of Commons on dangerous curves, not to block the wheels of progress.

New Conditions Demand More Caution.

The motoring season is coming; cars are emerging from their winter quarters and joining fleets of new ones going into commission for the first time; and every year the makers announce new models guaranteed to travel faster than the law allows or their predecessors could aspire to.

All of this means is that the streets will soon be again swarming with cars, more of them than in any former year; and that the chances for street accidents will be more numerous than in any past season. There is no way of avoiding this increasing liability. The more cars, the more risks for everybody who drives or walks.

In how many cases this increased liability will be translated into actuality will depend largely upon whether there is a corresponding development of caution on the part of drivers and walkers. And to some extent also upon whether there is a tightening up of the enforcement of traffic regulations.

The present conditions of 1927 will not be those of any former year. They will be more complicated. The degree of carelessness and the amount of restriction needed in past seasons will not suffice if the streets are to be made as safe as circumstances permit—which is none too safe a best.

Hobbling the Municipalities.

Premier Bowesley refused to curb the power of the Public Utilities Board to change the terms of a franchise agreement without the consent of the parties thereto. The board, he says, is better able to decide what such terms ought to be than are judges of the appeal courts.

Assuming this, what has it to do with the case? The municipalities do not want the rift in appeal in order that, when the Utilities Board has ripped open a contract and inserted rate clauses and other clauses, its own making, into the agreement, to ask for a rip it open again and insert some other clauses.

The notion that the municipalities want franchise contracts overhauled by the court of appeals after these have been overhauled by the utilities board is wide of the mark. What the municipalities want and are entitled to is that these contracts should not be overhauled by any board, court or person save the parties which made them.

Appeal to the courts from the rulings of the utilities commission would be valuable only because the courts might decide that the board had no business to tamper with the terms of a contract when the municipalities of the province were deprived of the right to appeal to the courts for an order compelling the utilities board to either offer franchise contracts or leave them alone!

Outrage Under Discipline.

Buglers who led the Cawthron soldiers who were put ashore and looting in Nanking—when the British and U.S. gunboats began to drop shells among the supposedly harmless and demoralized-minded marksmen.

These bugles-soldiers made a demented note into the thought that the shooting and looting was all done by soldiers who were "out of hand" and were doing a little killing and shooting for their own amusement and profit.

The soldiers who stopped shooting and hiked to headquarters when the bugles called would have done precisely the same thing if the bugles had called a couple of hours sooner. But the bugles did not call, and the officers in charge of the business that they had better call the Board of Trade.

The propaganda-work at Shanghai will have to work overtime before the thinking of the thinking can be made to believe that the soldiers who responded with slowness to the bugles ordered them to retire had been beyond the control of discipline when they were out-left to call.

Tomorrow's text will be suggested by Adjutant Stewart of the Salvation Army.

raging and murdering foreigners for hours previous.

Then the victorious experts will have a still surer time demonstrating that bugles which sounded with such promptitude and effectiveness when the shells began to drop could not have sounded with equal clearness and authority before they began to drop.

The Day

By EDGAR A. GUEST

The day begins slow. With tasks to do. Much like the last. Its hours are fast. Its length the same. The sun is bright. Shall make its flight. And sink at night.

And I shall meet the day. Meeting and cold. Warm hearts and cold: shall make its flight. And hear and see. And feel and frown. All night comes down.

What is to be? Depends on me. The mine to be? Depends on me. The day. With what of strength? With what of grace? I'll fill my place.

Lord, I would plan 'tis mine to be. For this day. For this day. To walk my way. To be a man. Laugh when I should. And at my best. Meet every test.

The Great Lawbreaker

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The great lawbreaker is dead. Of course, he breaks the laws of other persons, such as love, revenge, vanity and the like. But great lawbreakers break the law ten times to when any other feels like it once.

Old people say: "With experience and age, he will be good." But a young man who has an unhappy marriage has it cause in greed. Families are separated on account of it and ancient grudges were founded.

The passage of a passport law and an income tax law has been a great success, but people simply because there were occasions of graft. The money could have been raised in a much better way.

Greedy was equally behind the actions of Robt. W. Murray, the man who was the chief upon whom they acted as the same. They were money from them as an excuse that they were protecting those who had it not.

FOURTY YEARS AGO

From the Edmonton Bulletin, Saturday, March 28, 1887.

An Indian campaign is taking steps to experiment in the propagation of wild rice in this part of the country, with a view to increasing the food supply of the Indians. The Indians are to be directly by the larger number of wild rice which will be raised. The three agencies in this will have been furnished with the necessary rice to enable them to place it to the best advantage in suitable locations. The Indians are to be given the rice to experiment in the small lakes near here with a view to getting a good crop.

A letter from Banta says the foundations of the new P.E.I. building have been completed and will not be ready for occupancy until the end of June. Buildings are going up in the town of Lethbridge, and the new school will be ready in the early summer to accommodate the miners.

The Indian department has written to the Indians to advise them to get their contracts for 100 bushels of seed barley and 200 bushels of oats to be delivered at Halifax, and to advise them that the department of the government having business in the North West that part of the year, and that the Indians will be advised by the Indians to publicize their wants.

The first edition of the "Alberta" in Bulletin is the one that is the only one that has not as yet been published.

BUYING SEEDS FROM ENGLAND DRAWS CENSURE

Keen criticism of the action of Hon. George Headley in cutting local seed firms from government business and buying direct from English seedmen, was voiced in the legislature Tuesday night when Edmonton members questioned the minister closely on his exact record of over $400,000 in seeds this year.

Col. C. Y. Weaver, Conservative, led the attack, taking up an issue which had been raised by Mr. Headley in the House the day before the House and when he had asked the minister if he thought that the change had been made because of complaints as to the quality of the seeds of the English merchant. Meantime the Edmonton members asked him if he knew that no complaint had been registered with the government, and he replied that he had not, but that he had received a report that 186,000 packages of seeds had been purchased in 1926, while only 152,000 were purchased this year from a firm which had been in business for 16 years and which had never received a complaint.

No Reports Against Seed

Mr. Headley said he had no complaints which he had actually received by the department, but held that the government had not been found satisfactory in connection with the quality of the seeds. There was a variation in carrots, beets and turnips, which he said had led to the conclusion that the seeds were not of a high standard. He admitted that the quality of the seeds was not up to the standard of the judges of the show, but held that those who had failed to get prizes and awards were not to blame. In his official report the minister said the opinion was that there might have been a variation in the quality of the seeds.

Mr. Headley said if the minister was buying any seed locally this year, and he had not, he had no objection to that, but that he was not and that the present procedure was only an attempt to see that the work out satisfactorily would be done.

He asked if it had not occurred to the minister to divide the order two or three ways.

"Wouldn't it have been better to have a local seedman and not a real competitor?" he asked, "using some of the local seed so that you would really know if these were a different quality?"

Mr. Headley said the idea had not occurred to him, but he agreed that the judges might be wrong, and that the minister had not been asked if it had not occurred to the minister to divide the order two or three ways.

Mr. Headley said the minister had only an experiment, but he asked if the government would not consider it for the government's use.

Col. Weaver's Motion Made

Col. Weaver also asked why no complaint had been made by the seedmen in question, and pointed out that the buying of the seeds in England was a good idea, as the seeds purchased there was added to the cost of the seed. He asked the government to sell the seeds direct to the government and asked him to use their name, but on second thought he said that the man had been building up his business and that he did not want to see his way clear to a change of name, as he had been doing well for those who had purchased from them and ignored Alberta dealers.

Mr. Headley said it was an impression that the government, and particularly the minister, were not making it more and more difficult for the local seedmen to compete.

Mr. Headley also pointed out that the minister was only an experiment, and while agreeing that it was a good idea, he said that the minister had been in touch with the members of the legislature, and that the vote being passed by the minister, the vote being passed by the government supporters.

Postmaster Man Elected Postmaster's Executive

OTTAWA, March 31.—W. C. Cox of Oakville, Ont., was elected president of the Canadian Postmasters' Association at the annual meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Hamilton, Ottawa. G. H. Frooter, Aurora, Ont., who has been the secretary-treasurer of the association for the past two years, was unanimously re-elected to that office.

The new executive includes C. D. Green, St. John's, Newfoundland; C. A. Cunningham, general supervisor, Toronto; W. F. Pillar, manager, Vancouver; W. C. G. Scott, superintendent, Edmonton; W. C. Cranston, general agent, Vancouver; G. E. H. Harkness, manager, Victoria; E. Frazee, W. Natress, J. Watson, manager, Prince Albert; G. W. D. Patterson, manager, Kamloops; G. Bishop and C. Smith, manager, Victoria; and J. D. McLean, manager, Vancouver.

The convention continued Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. Headley also pointed out that the minister was only an experiment, and while agreeing that it was a good idea, he said that the minister had been in touch with the members of the legislature, and that the vote being passed by the minister, the vote being passed by the government supporters.

BULKY STATUTES CONSUME TIME OF LEGISLATURE

Back From Prince George To Face Police Charges

Brought back from Prince George, B. C., where he was sentenced recently to serve four years in pent-up, he returned home Saturday evening, having been found satisfactory in connection with the 186,000 packages of seeds he had purchased in England. The variation in carrots, beets and turnips, which he said had led to the conclusion that the seeds were not of a high standard. He admitted that the quality of the seeds was not up to the standard of the judges of the show, but held that those who had failed to get prizes and awards were not to blame.

In his official report the minister said the opinion was that there might have been a variation in the quality of the seeds.

Mr. Headley asked if the minister was buying any seed locally this year, and he said that he was not, but that he was not and that the present procedure was only an attempt to see that the work out satisfactorily would be done.

He asked if it had not occurred to the minister to divide the order into two or three parts.

"Wouldn't it have been better to have a local seedman and not a real competitor?" he asked, "using some of the local seed so that you would really know if these were a different quality?"

Mr. Headley said the idea had not occurred to him, but he agreed that the judges might be wrong, and that the minister had not been asked if it had not occurred to the minister to divide the order into two or three parts.

Mr. Headley said it was an impression that the government, and particularly the minister, were not making it more and more difficult for the local seedmen to compete.

Mr. Headley also pointed out that the minister was only an experiment, and while agreeing that it was a good idea, he said that the minister had been in touch with the members of the legislature, and that the vote being passed by the minister, the vote being passed by the government supporters.

Col. Weaver's Motion Made

Col. Weaver also asked why no complaint had been made by the seedmen in question, and pointed out that the buying of the seeds in England was a good idea, as the seeds purchased there was added to the cost of the seed. He asked the government to sell the seeds direct to the government and asked him to use their name, but on second thought he said that the man had been building up his business and that he did not want to see his way clear to a change of name, as he had been doing well for those who had purchased from them and ignored Alberta dealers.

DOROTHY DIX

Two Angles of the Tragic Mother-in-Law Versus Daughter-in-Law Problem and a Solution for Both—Does Worthwhile Man Ever Borrow From a Woman?—Sickly Girl and Her Broken Engagement

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I have been married four years during which time my husband's mother has been with us constantly. She came to our new home with a large sum of money, which she has never been away for a single day. She took possession of the kitchen and I dare not go into it. My husband and I are the only ones who eat there, but we do so for evening occasionally. I work, have a good pension, and have a good time. I have a house to my mother-in-law and renting me a room somewhere else, but my husband strongly objects to this. What can I do?

DESPERATE DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—I have an only child, a son, who married some four years ago, and I married him. He is a good man, but his wife has given him all sorts of things, even her trousser, as she was a poor girl but the rarely leaves him. I work, have a good pension, and have a house to my mother-in-law and renting me a room somewhere else, but my husband strongly objects to this. What can I do?

DEAR DIX—My husband and I are lonely and my heart is broken by the way my daughter-in-law treats me. What can I do?

SICKLY GIRL

Answer: In these two letters you have the two sides of the in-law problem, which is the most painful thing in the world, because it is such an unnecessary tragedy. Nothing sits harder than two women who are good wives and kind and generous women to every one else, yet the guilty one is the one who is most pitiful and the other is the one who is most foolish toward their daughters-in-law and their mothers-in-law.

Indeed, there seems to be some poison in the very relationship of in-laws, which steals the milk of human kindness for women. No techniques are as fierce as those which exist between a man's wife and his mother. No war for supremacy is so cruel, fought out for every one else, as the war for the guilty one's place in the world, and the other's place in the world, toward their daughters-in-law and their mothers-in-law.

One could weep over the folly of it all, because the relationship between mother-in-law and daughter-in-law could be, and often is, so beautiful and full of comfort and happiness for them both. And because of the in-laws' mutual love and respect, they could be treating each other with the consideration that they would show to any other woman, the mother-in-law and daughter-in-law could save themselves from the misery of the one who is most foolish, who, after all, is the mother-in-law.

Take these two cases of bitterly unhappy women. In the first one the young wife only asks to have her own home and her own husband to her, not her mother-in-law, and the daughter-in-law demands her.

The older woman must have felt the same way about her husband and her home when she was young. Why, then, does she not let the young girl have the pleasure of being a mother-in-law? If her mother-in-law is compelled by poverty to live with them, why cannot she be housed in a room of her own, on which she can sit and at least be a housekeeper? She can earn her room and expenses in it so that her daughter-in-law may enjoy her husband's society alone?

If mother-in-law would remain from building a home and trying to run it, she would be more than any other one thing to make these persons great with their in-laws, instead of being regarded as pests.

In this second case a selfish and self-centered young woman makes a lonely old widow most miserable, and the old widow is compelled to carry the load. The old woman does not try to live with her daughter-in-law, but she keeps her to herself as a guest, as she is in her daughter-in-law's house, and refrain from trying to be a burden and a pest.

One wonders, that any girl who does not realize that every husband and wife who love each other want to be alone at times, and that they don't want their parents to be there, would be so foolish as to insist on being a mother-in-law. If mother is compelled by poverty to live with them, why cannot she be housed in a room of her own, on which she can sit and at least be a housekeeper? She can earn her room and expenses in it so that her daughter-in-law may enjoy her husband's society alone?

If mother-in-law would remain from building a home and trying to run it, she would be more than any other one thing to make these persons great with their in-laws, instead of being regarded as pests.

It is only necessary for woman to apply the Golden Rule to it and to treat each other as they would like their in-laws to be treated.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—I am engaged to a man who is temporarily out of employment. I have loaned him money for his own personal expenses and I find that he is using it to take another girl out and having a good time with her. Do you think I will ever be happy married to him? Will time change him?

ANSWER:

I should say not. Such a man is a cost to the house, and million roses would not bring him from what he is. The sooner you break off your engagement to him the better.

The chances are, however, that he doesn't intend to marry you anyway, and is merely grafting what money he can get out of you. He will be the sort of man who will be a burden to you, and will be up to all the space in running around with other women.

A worthwhile man never borrows money from a woman except in a case of desperate need, and under no circumstances will he make a good investment in what you let him have, if you have bought the knowledge of how to get along without him.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—The other day I failed and the man to whom I was betrothed broke the engagement, giving the excuse that he is not rich enough to support a delicate wife. Has this anything to do with love?

TRROUBLED.

The chances are, however, that he doesn't intend to marry you anyway, and is merely grafting what money he can get out of you. He will be the sort of man who will be a burden to you, and will be up to all the space in running around with other women.

It is a three-day engagement at "Dreamland theatre," 1000 Main, a 2000-seat auditorium, in any art and which is more compelling in its weirdness than anything else.
